Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) affects millions of women and girls worldwide. Increasingly, migration and medicalization have made this an important topic that requires health care providers in many countries to ensure they are able to provide appropriate and sensitive care for women and girls who have had FGM.

This documentary is designed to provide insights into many aspects of FGM and also deliberately raises questions that are critical in understanding why FGM continues to be very common to this day in both rich and poor communities alike.
